Key Takeaways from the Miles Mathi

Based on 1 source

Key Takeaway Point	Evidence from Source	Narrative Argument	Source
Mandatory Flight Recording Equipment Absence	Mainstream sources like Wikipedia claim the Sikorsky helicopter had no black box or flight recorder, yet these have been mandatory on all commercial aircraft, including helicopters operated by companies like Island Express, since 1967.	Title: Yes, Kobe Bryant Faked his Death by Miles Mathis. Let's talk about the absolute physical impossibility of the official narrative regarding the equipment on that helicopter. We are told by the mainstream media and even the NTSB that there was no black box. No flight recorder. In 2020? On a commercial Sikorsky? Give me a break. Federal law has mandated these devices since 1967. If Island Express was flying without them, they would have been shuttered by the FAA instantly. This isn't just a minor oversight; it's a glaring beacon of fabrication. It echoes the same hollow fictions we saw during 9/11 where critical data evidence just 'disappears' to protect a manufactured story. They need the data to be missing so they can tell you whatever fairy tale they want about the flight path without any digital witnesses to contradict them.	[1]
